President's Message

We are a safe haven church, short term, during a Hurricane Emergency for all Members and friends. It was a success last year. Sorry, no pets.

Regarding: The successful $2.00 fund raiser "Birthday Cake Fund" on the first Sunday of the month. It has been approved by the Board and is separate from the Social Activities Committee. Judith will provide a beautiful Publix Birthday Cake every 1st Sunday and treats to follow.

Kudos to Joan Burnett for keeping me in line as your new President.

Kudos to Gordie Dinmore and Bree Hill for their dedicated landscaping.

Kudos to Amy Haiken and Gordon Hart for all of their computer skills and knowledge.

God Speed,

Joe Verdi President

Sunday Services

08/05/18 Speaker: Dave Koveleski

Background: Dave has been a member of NCUU for about ten years. He is a former member of the Board of Directors, the current chairman of the Bylaws Committee, the NCUU purchasing agent, and one of our NCUU players. He is an all-around nice guy and loves puppies.

Topic: Why Atheists go to Church

Summary: Various reasons?? Why??

08/12/18 Speakers: Tom Hibberd and Bree Hill

Background: Both Tom and Bree, NCUU members recently attended the recent 2018 UUA General Assembly in Kansas City Missouri, Tom as an NCUU delegate and Bree as a working staff member. Joan Burnett also attended online and was the other official NCUU voting delegate

Topic: Their Reports and Experiences of the UUA 2018 General Assembly.

08/19/18 Speaker: Santosh Kamath

Background: Santosh's credo is that truth is always "there", whether absolute or relative, and that it is to be sought actively and earnestly. He believes also that there is inherent purpose in life itself, and that we share that common purpose, which is the knowledge of self and of the infinite Essence through rational thought, "prayer" and meditation, and words and actions/interactions. This has informed his personal and professional life as a student of the STEM sciences and linguistics, in his appreciation of the arts, and in his stints as an organic chemist/researcher, aerospace engineer, spiritual wanderer, higher education instructor, academic advisor, institutional researcher, stock market trader, and servant of the servants of Creation. Anne, the love of his life, is his eternal spiritual partner.

Topic: False Dichotomies ... A Search For Truth And Reframing Closed Ended Questions: We live in a world increasingly characterized by confrontation, antagonism, and other forms of conflict, whether physical, emotional, or “other”. This leads to often unintended dichotomous thinking ... either this or that, a binary choice. It is generally the result of inherited assumptions, almost always unexamined, and usually unconscious. Examples will be provided during the conversation with the friends in August (that’s the teaser). In a search for otherwise elusive truth, will explore how to navigate the “false dichotomy” terrain ... from the individual to the nuclear domestic unit (family, for example) to the extended domestic unit, on up to state, regional, national, and global units. A foundational context is provided based on Bahá’í principles gleaned from authoritative texts.

08/26/18 Speaker: Don Wright

Background: Don and Jeanne Wright live in Inglis, FL and have been members of NCUU since 2010. Don retired in 2007 from the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, College of William and Mary, where he was a professor. He continues to work part time as Director of Coastal and Environmental Research for the Southeastern Universities Research Association, a non-profit consortium of 60 universities based in Washington, DC. Jeanne and Don have two daughters, Kylie and Shannon, and one grandson Rafael (or “Raffi”) Fung. Kylie and Raffi live in Philadelphia and Shannon lives in San Jose, CA. Travelling, Eastern Religions, Scuba Diving and Mountain Hiking continue to be among the hobbies of Don and Jeanne. Most recently, researching, writing and editing the recently published book Tomorrow’s Coasts: Complex and Impermanent was a stimulating, and somewhat obsessive 18-month preoccupation for Don.

Topic: Tomorrow’s Coasts: Complex and Impermanent (which is also the title of a new book that Don will donate a copy of to NCUU’s library.
<https://www.springer.com/us/book/9783319754529>.)

Topic Summary: In no environment is the connection between people and nature stronger than in coastal systems. Half of the world’s 7 billion people live within 60 miles of the shore. Climate change, sea level rise, ecosystem evolution, altered river discharge and changes in the size, intensity and duration of storms will accelerate the degradation of coastal realms over the decades ahead. In concert with these changes, the socioeconomic environment is also impermanent. The coastal systems and coastal communities of the future will be different from those of today. Within the near future, as many as 2 billion people will probably be living in low-lying, mostly squalid, urban coastal realms subject to frequent flooding. Epic tragedies await many parts of the world. Resilience of vulnerable communities will require world-wide acceptance and planning for what lies ahead. The assault on reason and nature by deniers must be strenuously resisted by humanity at large.

Pay it Forward Story

When Emmett Township Public Safety Officer Ben Hall pulled over a woman for a traffic violation, he saw that her 5-year-old son wasn't sitting in a booster seat, which he absolutely should have been in. Instead of giving Alexis DeLorenzo a ticket, Hall drove promptly over to Walmart, given that DeLorenzo said she knew the boy should be in a booster seat but couldn't afford one.

"It was the easiest 50 bucks I ever spent," he told Fox.

DeLorenzo was beyond touched by the gesture, and said, "As soon as I can afford it, I will be paying forward."
